

From the Editor

Dear authors, reviewers and readers, you have 39 (2) issue of the Journal of Information and Organizational Sciences in front of you. In this issue you will find seven high quality papers: six original scientific papers and one survey paper. The papers in this issue again cover very different aspects of communication sciences and informatics.

I have to address thanks to the authors who have trust in the quality of our Journal and send their papers for publishing, to reviewers who incorporate their knowledge into the improvement of the papers, and to advisory, editorial and publishing boards who make the publishing of the journal possible.

At the end I want to emphasize that from the next issue Journal will have new visual design, which is presented at the end of this issue. I hope that authors will have no problems to adapt their future papers in accordance to it.

I wish you a pleasant reading.
